SUPERVISOR BODY CONSIDER COUNTY PLAN FOR RIGHT OF WAY

Method of Handling Drowning Cases Also to Come Before Board

When the county board of supervisors convenes September 10, two things of importance in addition to the regular routine of business will come before the board for settlement. One is the problem of securing right of way for state bond issue roads, which heretofore has developed upon the townships, Lake county heing one of the five countles in the state where the securing of right of way is left to the township instead of to the county. The plan as practiced in Lake county has been a hardship on many of the townships, especially in Antioch where high-priced land in subdivisions has made the purchase price prohibitive, it heing nearly impossible for a township to bond sufficiently to raise funds, In consequence completion of the state bond lesse rautes has been delayed, according to Supervisor William Rosing. By having the county at large assume the responsibility of securing the necessary right of way, the financial burdon will be equalized and constructed can then proceed much more rapidly than under the present plan.

Drowning Victims a Problem

With "numerous drownings occurring throughout the county, especial- Antioch Barber Coaxes ly in the lake region, the need for regular method of procedure by county authorities has become more apparent this year than ever before. In the past, it seems that the recovery of bodies of drowned victims and the disposal of bedies has been anybody's business. A sel method of procedure will eliminate delay and morticians of responsibilities they chould not be permitted to assume.

Solution of the problem will be one of the lasks of the supervisors when they meet in September.

HELEN PEDERSON WINS FOUR YEAR SCHOLAR-SHIP AT U. OF ILLINOIS

to Serve Banquet for Gov. Emmerson

Economics at the Antioch Township High school, and winner of the Farmers' Institute Scholarship to altend a two weeks' school at the Illinois State Fair, recently returned from Springfield as the winner of a four year scholarship to the University of Hilnois, being selected from a large group of girls proficient in the art of home economics. This scholarship was awarded not only for her ability along this line, but also because of the excellence of her general school superintendent of rural schools, reported Saturday.

It was also learned from C. L. Kuill, Secretary of the Lake County. Farmers' Institute, that Miss Pedersen was one of the twelve girls at the State Fair School who assisted serving a hanquel in honor of Gov.

Miss Pedersen and Mildred Elsbury of Gurnee were the two Lake county girls entries at the domestic school at the state fair. This is the first year that Lake county has ever been represented by girls at the fair.

The weis of Canada-like these of the United States-are asking for "regulation" in the interest of "temperance." They tell us that Prohibltion has been tried and falled, (but has it?) and that we should try some other method of "regulating" the liquor business. They point toward the method of regulation adopted in Canada as an example which we should follow. It is this wot game to ris and children, Mrs. Geo. W. Dadge | conceal the fact that Canadian "regulation" as a temperance measure, is a tragle falluro.

The Associate Editor of the Toronto Olobe, which is probaly Canada's greatest newspaper, has recently written an article for publication in which he presents facts and statistics which plainly raveal the failure of Canadian regulation as a temperance measure. For instance, in 1917 when Canada had complete prohibition the hooting sales of liquor amounted to $25,000,000, while in 1929 under Government liquor sale there was over $55,000,000 worth of liquor sold. In other words, the Canadlan Government modified the prohibition laws which they had to reduce the consumption of liquor, but instead the amount was greatly increased. The Ontaria figures for convictions for offences against the liquor laws, such as bootlegging, also speak for themselves. In 1917, under complete prohibition there were 2,927 convictions. In 1920, under partial prohibition there; were 4,385 convictions. In 1928, undar Government Liquer Sale there were 7,812. According to these figures it does not look as though the repeal of stringent liquor laws makes any less violations of the laws. On "What business has the church in meddling with such affairs as Prohibition," some people are asking. If it is the husiness of the church to extend a helping hand to the one who is down and out is it not the business of the church to help change the condillions which create such character? It the church is interested in a higher plain of living haw can it sit idly by and do nothing against the forces which prevent the atlalament; of a higher plain of living?

have not taken the least notice of Mr. Micawber's communication, Indeed, I may be superstitious, but it appears to me that Mr. Micawher is destined never to receive any answers whalever to the great majorily of the comnuntentions lie writes."

Mrs. Micawher was quite right in her predictions. He was only having the experience which most of us have in receiving no answers to our letters. Her husband was asking for financial ald from his wife's relatives, and nothing is so little likely to arouse enthuslasm and bring a quick response in letter writing as a request for as gentlemanly terms as were Mr. Mleawber's. There is a reason why people do not answer letters, and the first of these is that selfish people see no use la replying to a letter if it is no advantage to them to do so. Mr. Micawber's "In-laws" had no desire to lend him money which they were convinced they would never see again. The man who owed me had no intention of paying unless forced to do so, so why waste time and a postage stamp in writing A great many people have the best intentions to answer, but procrastination : puts off the evil day until they are ashamed to write or the ohligation may pass entirely out of their memory. Not everyone writes easily. The proper word or the correct form eludes one. It is a problem to know just what to say, and not knowing there is the excuse for not writing at nll. How many people when giving no excuse for falling to acknowledge n letter, sny, "Well, I just didn't koow what to say, so I put it off until I was really ashaned to write." Other people have no regular place In which to write ar possibly no materinis at hand when the time is available or the inspiration seizes them. The letter which is not answered today is pretty sure to be put off until day after tomorrow if not until later. PRODUCTS OF FARM FOR LABOR DAY MENU

Color Combination hances Appearance of Table Exceedingly

Here it is nearly, time for school to start ngalu. Just one more hellday week-end, before the children start their round of school activities. Have you planned just what you are going to do? Go on a last picule, entertain yourself or he entertained?

In case you intend to enterialn; what is the style of feast which you plan to place before the hungry expectant pairs of eyes at Lahor Day noonlide? Labor Day being, in a sense, the end of summer, and of the harvest season, doesn't it seem approprinte to use the products of the earth and of the farm for your only, remaining summer holiday dinner?

Here is a suggested menu: Fried chicken New potatoes

Gravy Lima beans in milk Corn on cob Tomato and cucumber saled

Watermelon pickles Fruit ice (raspherry or grape juice) Sunshine cake Conce, or mitk for children

This mean includes plenty of carbohydrates, (sugars and starches), protein, minerals, vitamins, and some

The oppearance of a table is always more attractive if the menu has been arranged, not only with the nutritiousness of the food in mind, which, of course, should be the first consideration, but with a definite color scheme also. The Proper Use For the Matron of the Refridgerator in the Home

I wonder how many, of us really use our lechoxes as they deserve to be used? Aren't we all tempted to pince things necording to the size of the containor, and where they fit mest easily, rather than to their relative position to the other foods and to the lce?

Of course, we all knew that the first requisite of proper earing of food is to have the refrigerator ctean, and food both elenn and fresh. Cold, only, will maintain this freshness, and prevent the grawth of bacteria without changing the composition of the food itself.

Generally, the more easily the food is assimilated the more easily it spolls, and therefore the colder it should be kept. Milk, soup stock and bulter should be put into the coldest part of the retrigerator-that is, just below the Ice chamber, not in the Ice chamber, please! Of course, all such foods as these should be in tightly covered vesscis. The soup or gravy should be put white hot into a scalded jar with a tight cover. When it is cool, put it into the refrigerator, but do not open the jar until the contents are to be used: work detail elaborates the white

Printing

There is one kind of printing that you want-printing that pays a dividend on the investment.

A letterhead with right sort of type properly halanced is a real businessasset. It winst be approval of the person receiving your letter, and while he is in this frame of mindyour letter laread.

The same reasoning applies to any other job of printing. Nestness, the right weight and kind of paper, the color of the ink, the selection of the type, all play an important part in the production of dividend printing.

We are equipped to give you that kind of printing. .to.you.

Just why our natural drinking water supplies should he so limited is probably a mystery to the man in the street, but to saultation engineers the problem is a very elementary one and one about which they have ralsed more or less fullic elamor for many years. The fact of the matter is that the public has indulged itself to the hilt in the act of committing slow suicide by polluting its natural water supplies without regard for possible consequences.

Judging from various englacering estimates, there would have been no shortage of potable water during the drought if the public had taken care to keep its existing supplies free from contamination. Public tendency to turn streams into open sewers, resulting in a frantic hunt for more water whon the existing feeble supplies were evaporated in the heat, is a grim truth which the drought has served to hring to general attention.

According to health authorities, reresources is one of the greatest health problems confronting the country today. Thompson ... Fosaland Here Sunday

Another non-league game well worth seeing has been scheduled for Sunday when the Fossland team, a fast independent club, comes to the local lot. Late today no game had been arranged for Labor day.

Pikevilla has arranged a Labor day game with the Waukegen Majors. .The game is one of the Lake county tournament, and the Majors and Pikeville are regarded as two of the fastest teams in the county. The game ought to be a good one.

New Worlds To Conquer

Mountain climbers from America and Europe, gathered in the Maligne Lake Section of Jasper National Park, Alberta, at the annual camp of the Alpino Club of Canada this summer, will essay a number of attempts to scale mountains which have never been climbed. The American Alpine Club will be officially represented by H. W. Hainsworth of New York and Max Strumia of Philadelphia. It is estimated that in the Maligne Lake area which is in the heart of the Canadian Rocky Mountains there are more than one hundred peaks which have never been climbed, many of them rising to more than 11,000 feet. Maligno Lake, on which the main camp of the Alpine Club will be pitched, is the largest placing fed lake in North America. Almost all of us, at some time or other, have given some thought to the value of having a good business; located in a good town. How many of us, however, have considered the value to the town, of having a good business located in the town?

Lack of intelligent understanding on this point, by the people who live in a community, is often a chief cause for the failure of that town to attain OUTSTANDING SUCCESS.

The support that business institutions receive from the community in which they are located determines the amount of success they can achieve as individual businesses AS WELL AS the amount OF SERVICE THEY CAN RENDER THAT COMMUNITY. Without the support of their community, business concerns cannot exist.

We wouldn't be so interested; it wouldn't mean so much to many of us, IF IT WERE NOT FOR THE FACT THAT THE BUSINESS INSTITUTIONS OF ANY COMMUNITY are THE HEART of that community! And unless the business institutions make outstanding successes, the town cannot hope to make an outstanding success. Cannot hope to grow and prosper as it should, and must! There are DEFINITE REASONS why business concerns are of such value to their town. Here are a few of them:

- 1. Business concerns pay the majority of the taxes in a community, and, therefore, furnish the largest part of the revenue for
- the support and improvement of the town. Business concerns furnish most of the employment for the 37 per cent of the people who are gainfully employed, and who in turn support the other 63 per cent.
- Business concerns furnish most of the energy and hrains which go into progressive movements for the henefit and up-
- Business concerns are the service stations which supply the needs and pleasures of the community, and the stronger these businesses are, the more service they can render the town.
- Business men are mainly the contact men with outside concerns and people, and in a large measure, make up the person-
- The appearance of the husiness district is the part of the city which has the most effect on outsiders, and from which their good impression of the town is derived. These are just a few. Many other points could be enumerated on the value of business concerns to the community. But additional points would be superfluous. We are all intelligent, and can grasp the importance of the business concerns to any community, and the value of giving them utmost support.

If you have a financial or sentimental interest in YOUR community, IT WILL PAY YOU to patronize your local concerns!

Business and professional interests ask only for the support of the community in order that they in turn may help support and build the community. This is one of the vital factors in the development of

Challenges Old Ideas About Lightning Rods

In a communication to the Academy of Sciences in Paris, says Pathfinder Magazine, M. V. Schaffers denies the familiar notion that lightning seeks wet ground and that lightning rods should niways have their ends earthed in moist soil, or better still, in the wet ground at the hottom of some near-by creek or pond. Using a generator of electric sparks long and powerful enough to be considered veritable artificial lightning, Schaffers found that the distance from which a spark would strike and the path which the spack took was affected but illtle by the wetness or dryness of the soll undernenth an earthed lightning rod or similar conductor.

Dr. E. E. Free, in reporting the investigator's finds, points out that it is well known that the paths and characters of natural lightning flashes frequently are ereatle, seeming to obey none of the established laws of electric conduction. The really effective matters in lightning danger or protection, it Schaffers is cofrect, are the presence of metal objects or other substances which, might be highly conducting for the electricity and the numbers of the electrified gas atoms called lons in

Pigeons Now Photographers

As a result of the important part played by carrier pigeons in the World war, German army officers recently have started extensive training of the birds and experimenting with them, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Some have been taught to carry an automatic camera strapped to their breasts, the apparatus being capable of making six exposures while the hirds are on the wing. Dogs are being trained with the birds, the animals bringing the birds in carriers strapped to their sides from the home port of the pigeons to officers whom the dogs have been taught to follow,

RIBBON INITIALS ON THEIR LINENS

(C) by D. J. Walsh.)

THEN Gertrude Heckwith was twelve years old her grandmother presented her with twelve yurds of linen sheeting, linen pillow-case tubing, and linen toweling.

"Enough for a start," grandmother, had said, adding tartly: "In my day, of course, a girl would have learned to spin and weave her own linens, but teday, with young girls getting flighty notions, I can't expect Gertrude to do nny more than hem and mark her own

The hirtliday Gertrudo was thirteen grandmother added a tablecloth and twelve napking to the contents of Gertrnde's cedar chest. On her fourteenth birthday came a dozen silver tenspoons, on her fifteenth six silver forks, en her sixteentli birthday twosliver tublespoons, a pulr of sliver augur tongs, a jelly spoon and six old-Inshloned hone-hundled knives.

The birthday Gertrude was seventen grandmother died. The muddled affairs of the estate settled; precious little heshles the chest and its neatly wrapped silver and carefully folded. linens proved to bo left for Gertrude. Forlornly sho watched the dear famillar farnishings of her grandmother's home taken away. Itesolutely she determined to "buy back" the pleces grandmother had most treasured. Firmly Gertrude said "No" to Alvin Griffen, the thin-lipped, sterneyed, middle-aged lawyer who had so oddly interpreted the enigmatic phrases in grandmother's quality worded, self-drawn will.

Ten years later found Gertrude a skilled accountant to a nearly city, earning an excellent salary, and commanding the awed respect which young men feel for the "Inhumunly" efficient young office woman.

Yet, in spite of the fact that regular hours, proper food and the peace of mind which no debts, plus a comfortable savings account, give anyone, had enused the years to pass lightly over Gertrude's head; she had no beaux.

"You've got to have pep nowadays, dearle," said the girl who shared a small apartment with Gertrude. "Whether you feel like it or not, you've got to bounce about and chatter, throw off sparks and tell 'em how that's the way to keep the sugar boys in line." Gertrude merely smiled quietly Kathleen talked a lot of nonsense, but at heart she was a sweet child, Gertrude knew. Some day she would settle down and marry one of the numerous young men who now danced attendance ut her pretty, shining stilt

Gertrude sighed as she went about gathering up the dishes and washing and drying them in the closet, which had been equipped with a diminutive slok and small gas stove and rechristened n "kitchenette." Slie siglied, for, like most superlatively elliclent young women, she wished wistfully that men might offer her a chicerful camaraderle rather than awe for her accounting skill,

The worst of it was that there seemed to be no liope of any beaux in the future. Year by year us Gertrude successfully solved one vexing problem after mother, bringing order out of the chaos of the figures put before her, the nwe seemed to increase, the chance for camaraderlo recede. And then came the night that Nathleen suddenly decliled to necept nn eleventh-hour invitation to dine with n man she had just met. To Gertrude was given the task of making Kathleen's peaco with the hean who had been scheduled to take her to a danco Inter in the evening.

Loyal to Kuthleen, yet hating to tell even a white He, Gertrude endeavored to think of some tactful explanation to make to Frank when he should arrive at the apartment to call for Kathleen. As she frequently dld when puzzling over a vexing problem, Gertrude took up a plece of sewing and bent over it, laying painstaking stitches in the fine fabric, unconsciously trying, perhaps, to draw closer to the spirit of the dear grandmother who, besides the lovely linens, had given Gertrude a heritage of character still mere valuable.

"Good evening," said a deep, pleasant voice when Gerrude answered the summons of the old-fashloned knocker, "I've come to make my young friend's pence with Miss Kathleen."

"Oh !! gusped Gertrude. Frank phoned that he was meet ing a cousin's train and asked me to present his apologies to Kalhleen." Gertrodo smiled as she answered; "And I was to make Kathleen's peace with Frank-to explain that an unexpected occurrence would prevent her going to the dance."

The man smiled in response and said: "Well, well. Here I have bean freiting at the thought of facing Miss Kathleen, and new I find the lady Isn't

"I was raised on Bunyon and the Bible," smiled the man in return. "Do you suppose that is sufficient recommendation for me to be permitted to Introduce myself?"

"Yes, Indeed," answered Gertrude1 "You must be Irwin Cummings. Do come in and share the alce little grate tire I'm enjoying while Kuthleen is nway."

Interestedly the mun looked about the pleasant, simply furnished room, tilints of light from the snapping coal fire were reflected on the polished wood of the quaint old-fashlened chair. in which Gertrude sut and on the lovely drop-lent table on which lay her, sewing and on the rows of books in a low case.

"Do my eyes deceive me, or is that table damask you were hemming?" inquired the man before the fire.

"Your eyes are not at fault," responded Gertrude, who was, if the truth was known, a trifle embarrassed to have been discovered in so Victorlan an occupation as hemming dianer nupkins, especially since she had heard what a brilliant young lawyer Frank's friend was, and since now that she had really met the man, she realized that the effusive Kuthleen had been right in her extravagant, claims that Irvin was "simply grand" and that he was also "just the right sort" for the dilldent Gertrude to "full for."

"Don't stop sewing on my account," urged Irvlog, as he settled comfortably into the chair lieslilo the hearth. To tell the truth it will be no interesting experience to observe a modern young woman wield a needle-an experlence I'vo never had."

As Gertrude picked up the square of damask the man leaned forward and touched a corner of the fabric between his fingers. "It's a lovely qualitylike the nupkins my mother used to hem." With a sight the man added, "One thing I dislike about restaurants is the cottony stuff they call table

"Iteal linen is nice," answered Gertrude, glancing up from the narrow hem she was creasing.

"Funny how things hoppen," said Irving Cummings, not so many weeks later, as he sot before the fire la Gertrude's living room grate. "Frank and Kathleen had told me how smart you were at accounting until I decided you must be some sort of brown-halred adding machine. Then when I discovered you in the net of hemming table linen I knew they hadn't praised you half enough."

Gertrudo smiled in happy slience as Irving continued, "Now you've finished all the hems, you haven't any mere ex-

ense for putting off our wedding." "I must mark the things," demurred

"Not until we are settled in a home of our own," thruly announced Irvin. "Then when you aren't working in an office all day you can embroider to your heart's content-lovely swirly letters such as my mother used to

"Ribbon Inttlais," responded Irvin yours and mine-like old-fashloned peoplo who planned when they were married, to stay married, and who weren't infraid to sew symbols of

Custom That Governed

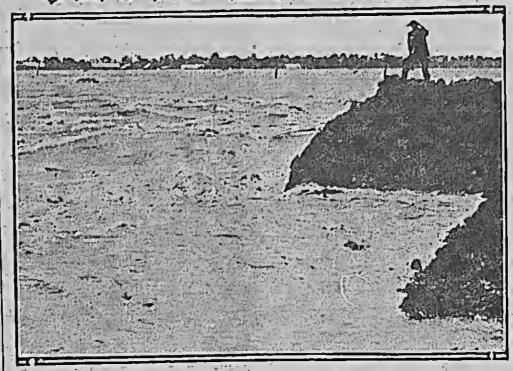

Early Iceland Unions Marriage among the early Norse scitlers of Iceland was, then as now, a matter which concerned the kindred, and it is emphasized in nearly all porthern and Icelandic history that there must be substitutial equallty in prestige and in material cir. cumstances between the man and the woman about to contract a marriage. When members of different familles Intermarried, rights and obligations en both sides prose, because thereafter controversies were regarded as of common interest to all members. Conduct might result in a line, which, in turn, would become an obligation of remote relatives. Hence, relatives of a young man, deemed qualified to enter the married state, neted as ambassadors in his behalf to the relatives of the woman; but they did not savo on rare occasions, go to the ludy herself. It was among the conditions of the right of inheritance in children-really of legitimacy-that their mother had become engaged with the consent of her relatives, that adequate dower had been forthcoming, and that a legal wedding had been

Sometimes want of rank was balanced by superior wealth and the match was deemed satisfactory-such was the situation in the story of Gudmund the Rich, about 1187, when the match between Telt and Oddkatla wns approved. (Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.) ATURE played invortes la apportlening the great rivers of the world. Of the dezen largest, six are in Asia and three in Africo, leaving only three for the two continents of the New world. And among the twelve leaders, Europe and Australia are wholly unrepresented.

The longest single river is the Nile, measuring some 4,000 miles from hend to mouth, The Nile is further distinguished in that it has no tributaries for the last 1,500 miles of its course to the sea. During this stretch its waters are considerably reduced in volume by evaporation and Irrigation, so that it grows smaller lastead of larger toward its mouth.

Other African rivers among the length-scoring twelve are the Niger and the Congo, both fed by the trep-Ical rains of hot regions near the Equator. In a general way they morn nearly resemble South America's representative, the Amazon, than the great streams of the colder northern: continents.

Of Asla's six longest rivers, four are In Siberia, the Ob, Yenlsel and Lena, flowing north late the Arctle ocean, and the Amur emptying into an arm of the Pacific. The other two are the Yangtzo and Hwang, or Yellow, river of Chlan.

These twelve river basins represent the greatest variety of climate and elvilization. The Amozon and the Congo flow through lush equatorial jungles inhabited by birds of brilliant, plumage, wild animals and savoge tribes, while the months of the Yealsel and the Lena are above the northern timber line and their valleys support the sparsest population. The Mississippl and the Yangtzo flow through established, if divergent, elvilizations, with rich eitles along their banks like jewels on a string. The Nile is one of the eradles of world history; the Mackenzle la still a frontier stream. Five of the dozen rivers flow to the north. These are the Nile, Mackenzie, Ob, Yenisel, and Lena. The Mississippl and Niger flow south. The Amur, Yangtze, Hwang and Amazon run eastward. Only the Congo points toward the west.

Difference in Floods.

All these streams overflow their banks at Intervals but the results are strangely different. In the case of the Mississippi and the Yangize, floods are national disasters bringing untold suffering to millions. The annual overflow of the Nile with resulting fertilization of the valley by the deposit of slit is the source of the wealth of Egypt. The llwang, or Yellow river, from its habit of overflowing its banks and changing lia entire course at intervals is known as the "scourge of China.".

The Amazon and the Congo lie almost under the Equator, and the other ten longest rivers are in the northern hemisphere. Four flow lote the Arctle ocenn. A reason is not fur to seek. The greatest land masses are in the northern half of the world, and without large land areas long rivers are impossible. The smaller continents of Australia and Europe are not represented in the dozen. Similarly, the reason for the longest rivers flowing to the north and east is that the longest continental slopes extend in those directions.

The Yangtze and the Mississippi are lined with wealthy cities largely beenuse of their lecution in the temperato zone. The trople Amazon, Niger, and Congo are too hot; the Mackenzle and the Sherian rivers are too cold for the favorable growth of towns. The Nile valley beyond Calro is a mero strip of green from 15 to 30 miles wide between two burning deserts. The Hwnng is too variable in its habits to encourage navigation or river ports. From the earliest times these leng rivers have furnished high roads for the expleration of continental interiors. Nero sent an expedition to discover the headwaters of the Nile, which falled to reach its objective, Russian penetration of Siberia followed the great river beds. The Amazon and the Congo are still highways of discovery. Hend reaches of buktu. The histories of the world's river basins have been the alstory of the world's empires. HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

Unsolved Riddles That Still Pazzie Authorities Here and Abroad

What Became of Hendrik Hudson?

OF NO one who has figured prominently in the early history of America is so little known as of liendrik Undson, whose name is perpetuated in that of the great river of New York state, Hudson's bay and oumerous other sections of the northeast. Where was he hern? No one knows. When or where or how did he die? All these are mysteries on which no existing records appear to throw the slightest light, while the final disposition of his body is also one of the riddles of the Golden Age of Discovery.

Historians first present the great explorer as standing on the quarterdeck of a small ship which he thought he was guiding toward the North pole and the final curtain is drawn over his eareer at the moment that he took to a small beat in Hudson's bay with eight of his sailors, all of whom were completely lost to the world from that

Hudson flashed before the public suddenly, remained a prominent figure for only four years, and then disappeared as if the sea had swallowed him up-which it quite possibly did. No one knows his age at the time he made his discoveries, save for the rather vague statement that he was born somewhere in England during the Sixteenth century, while his father and grandfather are supposed to have, been London merchants interested in the Muscovy company. It was on April 19, 1607, that Hudson, accompanied by his sixteen-yearold son, John, and ten sallors, left England on the Muscovy company's little 60-ton ship, the Hopewell, Ills object was to discover the North pole and to sall across it to China and India, belleving that he could reach the Orient through a sea passage somewhere in the frezen North. Frustrated by a solid wall of lee, Indsoa returned from his first veyage a disappointed mnn and later made a second attempt with the same result.

On April 4, 1609, the explorer sailed from Amsterdam on the Unit-Moon and entered Delaware bay. Fluding this was not the transcontinental passage he was seeking, he sailed northward along the coast and, on September 2, 1009, reached lower New York hay, landing at what is now Coney island. From there he proceeded to Manhattun Island and sailed up the river which bears his name, still hoping that this might be the long-soughtfor strait which would lead him to the For East. The Half-Moon went as far as the river was navigable and then, beartsick with disappointment, Hudson again returned to Holland.

But the discoverer was not yet sat-Isiled and, in 1610, he set sail once more for the new world, steering his course further north until he came into the wide waters of what is now known as Hudson's bny. At first he mistook this bay for the Polar sea but, learning his mistake, he cootinued to push onward in his search for the Northwest passage. Finally his crew mutinted and, because the food supply commenced to run low, they decided to return home. So, on June 25, 1611, Hudson, his son and seven of the weakest of the sallors were set adrift in an open bont. This was the last that was ever heard of the explorer or any of his party. An expedition was sent out from England some time afterward to search for them, but no trace of the bont or its occupants could be found, nor has anyone ever, been able to learn the fate of the nine sallors. Possibly they perished in the waters of the bay which bears Hudson's name, possibly they reached land safely and were attacked by hostile Indians or it may have been that they starved to death—either in their boat or on land.

For many years rumors about the fate of the little band were plentiful and the quaintest of these reports has been told in legend form by Washington Irving, while other unverlied steries tell of a settlement of white men in the north country, and of its gradual merging with native tribes. Not long ago it was reported that a document had been discovered among the archives of the Hudson's Bay company which contained a confession of one of the mutineers and the statement that Hudson had been murdered and not east adrift, but this was later denied by the officials of the company. Though it is generally supposed that Hudson and his followers either died of starvation or were killed by the indians, there is absolutely no indication of what befell the custaways after the "Discovery" left them to their fate in an open boat in Hudson's bay.
